The guide provides methods to refer sources in your work and the benefits this brings, ensuring you adhere to the UCL policy on plagiarism.

Why should I cite my sources?

- Referring to past (and indeed future) authors to your work and demonstrate your breadth of your research.
- You list all citations as evidence of your work to find the information sources for themselves.
- Follows best practice of information used for an essay, report, presentation or final dissertation assignment, and for this you may be penalised. See the UCL policy on plagiarism.
